More than half of US households own a pet. Most are too busy to research the current politics behind the animal rights versus animal welfare movement.

Animal welfare, AW, movement wants to improve the conditions of animals, animal rights, AR, movement, in the long run, is against any and all animal use, even as pets.

The problem is, many animal rights groups are wolf in sheep clothing, pretending to be animal welfare. But upon close inspection it is clear they don't do anything for the animals, most money is spent in high salaries, fancy offices and lobbying.

These sneaky groups use anything for their agenda to separate honest animal lovers from their money:

“

The economy is bad and more houses are in foreclosure? Well, let's create a fund for pets affected by foreclosure, even though there is no definite proof more people are leaving pets behind when moving. There are just isolated cases of few pets left behind, which might not be a new occurrence at all, it might simply be a case of media focusing on it as the latest fashionable topic.

“

The real danger to animals is not the economy or homes foreclosures. The real danger is the extreme animal rights groups pushing for more and more legislation on animal ownership and use.

Blogger of the Month:

BloggerNews.net would like to thank and congratulate our Blogger of the Month for the month of May 2008 – The Stiletto for her fantastic political coverage over the past month!

The Stiletto comes from a broken home. Not broken in the commonly understood sense, but broken in the red state-blue state sense.

Like many Americans, The Stiletto's family is a mixed bag: Multicultural, multiracial, multiethnic, multinational, ecumenical, and includes members who are gay (in-laws, but still).

The Stiletto loves them all – albeit, at a distance in election years – so anyone who disagrees with her opinions had better refrain from recklessly lobbing accusations of racism, homophobia, jingoism or imperialism.

The Stiletto blogs about politics and ... you name it, since these days everything has become politicized at <http://thestiletto.com>.

The current trend of banning exotic animals, certain breeds of dogs (BSL, Breed Specific Legislation) without grandfathering, or limiting the number of pets, displaces more animals ( forcing them to be abandoned, released or surrendered to shelter or animal sanctuaries) than all the foreclosures in the whole USA.

Animal owners need to be cautious making sure the money they donate to these groups will not in the end be used against them and their own rights as animal owners. Research the groups you are donating to and educate yourself about their true goals to see if they own any shelters, and how much of their donations will go towards direct hands on animal care.

It is not fair for loved and spoiled exotic animals to be forced out of their loving home to some animal rights sanctuary that forbids any loving human contact with these animals, that is an abuse in itself.

Furthermore, these AR sanctuaries are dependent on donations, it makes absolutely no sense to remove the happy exotic pet from self supporting private home and send it to the sanctuary that is not self reliant and self supportive. If the economy is so bad, then charitable donations are the first expense people remove from their list.

BloggerNews.net Sponsors:

Animal rights bills turning currently legal well cared for pets into illegal ones, and sending them to an overcrowded 'no human contact' sanctuary that has no financial plan in place, is abusive and grossly irresponsible.

It is time to fight these AR groups in sheep clothing and protect our right to own a real pet wolf, or any animal of our choice, this is America.

Just Say NO! To Exotic Animal Bans, Just Say NO! To BSL and mandatory spay and neuter legislation.

I am a devoted lover of domestic and wild animals. I have been to Africa for several months at a time, worked with wild animals, felids, especially. I have worked with dedicated scientists, rehabilitators, behaviorists, exotic pet owners.

I agree with this person here who has written about Animal Rights. This person here is a responsible exotic and domestic animal owner. Animal Rights people are mistaken, even with good intent, and will help to cause extinction of wild animals, breeds, and will further separate humans from animals and nature. I find this really sad.

My hands-on contact and training with wild animals, my owning domestic animals, has kept me caring, loving, vigilant and respectful and revering of the natural world, how to love it, be with it, and at peace. And wild animals can be responsibly owned, loved, and they can be very happy too. I have seen this here in the United States and in Africa too.

I would ask the AR groups not to be so black and white, and not to take everyone's freedoms away, and to truly look at every situation and not be so judgmental.

Sincerely

Laura

We need an organization to say that we shall have legal recognition of the right to own the animals that we want. Elitism has just about destroyed the industry, along with charity scams that actually use animal lovers against each other. A clear set of principles and goals, established as the mission of a new organization, will go a long way towards fighting that.
