Various businesses within the Norfolk Division territory have been targeted by animal rights activists; whereby, locks to their stores have been glued shut, graffiti has been sprayed, and anti-meat posters glued to various fast food restaurants, to include McDonalds, Hardoes, and Red Lobster.

In addition to the above, a meat packaging plant in Chesapeake, Virginia, was the target of animal rights activists: whereby, the electrical circuits were cut causing the meat storage facility to lose power and meat to thaw. In all cases, PETA antimeat posters were pasted on the various establishments. PETA is headquartered in Norfolk, Virginia; however, representatives of PETA deny any affiliation with the ALF.

Newkirk gave further insight into PETA's alliance with ALF in a 1985 interview:

City Paper Interviewer (CP): "These groups destroy and have according to their own assertion destroyed millions of dollars of equipment. Do you agree with those tactics?"

Newkirk: "We don't choose to do those tactics here. I certainly more firmly disagree with the people who destroy and mutilate living things..."

CPI: "Destroying property is violating a human right, isn't it?"

Newkirk: "Is it the human right to torture others? We don't believe so. Human beings don't have any rights to torture, harm, and to destroy. No, you don't own those animals."

C?I: "Have you corroborated with them at all in planning some raids in which they destroy property?"

Newkirk: "If we had, we wouldn't say so. We don't discuss anything to do with that. We would never place them in jeopardy."

A PETA fact sheet entitled, "The Animal Liberation Front: The Army of the Kind," suggests a collaboration between Newkirk, PETA, and ALF: "The Animal Liberation Front's activities comprise and important part of today's animal protection movement... Without ALF break-in...many more animals would have sufferei..."
